Kay D'Evelyn La Montagne at Mountain Home

Historic barn is classic

setting for Mountain Home

by Kristin Witt

Walking into the Mountain Home barn, located at 27965 Meadow Drive, is a revival to the senses. It's an eclectic array of fine furnishings and accessories that invite you to slow the pace to a meander and drink it all in.

Meeting owner Kay D'Evelyn La Montagne completes the picture of well-planned mountain living that the store presents. Kay possesses a passion for design and superior home furnishings that literally fills the store.

Mountain Home first moved into the barn five years ago when Kay's husband, Ted La Montagne, closed the beloved Hardware Store, leaving the old Hiwan Barn in need of a purpose. So Mountain Home moved into the barn and began the process of lovingly coaxing the rustic elegance and mountain nobility back into the 90-year-old structure. Now around every corner and hanging from every beam there is a treasure for your home.

"We're not trying to create a magazine layout in people's homes," Kay explained. "We help you fill your home with pieces you truly love that will last a lifetime."

Kay believes that a home should speak with the voice of the people living there. Kay proudly explained that their design services, directed by Peggie Nikander, are uniquely personal to each client. "Peggie brings great energy and an ability to listen to our clients," Kay said, "making our design services sought after and suited to the individual homeowner."

Over the years they have discovered a need for appropriate mountain lighting to accompany the mountain furnishings. So Mountain Home is adding a lighting area to offer sconces, ceiling fixtures, and floor and table lamps.

Also, before the store moved to the Barn, Mountain Home was known for its rich selection of gift and accent items, and Kay is bringing that section back. Just inside the front entrance, tables and floor are filling with gift items. With the holidays racing toward us, the gift department is arriving just in time. If you are looking for a bargain, ask to see the "sale barn" outbuilding full of half-price treasures.

Mountain Home serves as the anchor store for the Evergreen Design Center that includes Rocky Mountain Log Furniture, Mountain Kitchen and Bath Design, Pangaea Carpets, Sundance Design (landscape architecture) and soon Stems, a favorite floral design boutique. The Design Center was the vision of Kay's late husband Ted, and she can feel him cheering as each new piece comes together, bringing all the elements of brilliant mountain design under one umbrella.

As Kay walked through the Barn she talked about the amazing transformation as each new area of design is added, reclaiming yet another space in this beautiful old building. When asked what she likes about doing business here in Evergreen, Kay answers without hesitation. "This community is amazing, supportive and caring. They make it all worthwhile."
